

MINER ARRESTED WAS BOY'S FRIEND

Frank Hamilton in Jail Charged With Passing Worthless Check.

BOUGHT LAD SOME CLOTHES.

Offered Him Work and Would Pay
Him Back as Soon as He Was Able—Protests Innocence.

Frank Hamilton, 62 years old, who claims to be employed by the Healy Mining company of this city as foreman in its mine in American Fork canyon, was arrested by Police Officers Martin and Snow in Provo, Tuesday, on a charge of passing fraudulent bank checks, according to word received here this morning by Walker Bros. bank.

After communicating with the Provo officers, the bank cashier pronounced a check for $25, which Hamilton had passed on the New York Clothing company in that city, a forgery.

Hamilton was accompanied by a boy, giving his name as Arthur Terry, and claiming Denver as his home. Hamilton swore that he had purchased a suit of clothes for the boy, costing $19, and that he had taken the remainder in change. He maintains that the boy is entirely innocent of any knowledge of the check transaction. Young Terry vows that he did not know the check was forged, and it is probable that he will be released. However, he will be compelled to appear as the principal witness against the old man who befriended him and broke the law in doing so.

According to the account received by Walker Bros. bank, Terry says that he met Hamilton by chance in a Commercial street saloon in this city, and that Hamilton took pity on his poverty-stricken condition and offered him work on some mining property which he said he was developing in American Fork canyon. Terry avers that this accounts for his being with the old man in Provo, and that the clothes were bought for him by Hamilton and were supposed to be paid for out of his future earnings.

HAD BEEN DRINKING.

Terry further states that although they left Salt Lake City to go to American Fork canyon, Hamilton, who had been drinking heavily, suggested before they got to American Fork that they might as well go on to Provo, where they could enjoy Thanksgiving day. Hamilton said at that time that they could return to American Fork the following day.

What aroused the suspicion of the Provo officers was the attempted passage of a check for $10, by Hamilton, on John E. Homer's bar, known as the Buffet. Hamilton visited the saloon Tuesday morning, and after taking a drink, he tendered the check in payment thereof, but it was declined by the bartender, who "squealed" about the matter to the police.

The check was drawn on that State Bank of Provo, signed with what is believed to be a fictitious name, "John Watson," and endorsed by Hamilton, in whose favor the check was drawn.

It developed that the form of check used in this transaction by Hamilton has not been used by the bank for several years, and the handwriting appears to be that of the same person, and is clumsily done, if it actually is a forgery.

The check passed on the New York Clothing company made its appearance later in the day, and was not known at the time Hamilton was arrested. It was drawn on the Walker Bros. bank of this city, and signed "S. L. Hickok." It was endorsed by Hamilton.

CLOTHIER GROWS SUSPICIOUS.

Learning that Hamilton had been arrested for attempting to pass another check on the saloon, the clothing company manager communicated with the bank in Salt Lake City and was soon informed that the check which Hamilton had passed on him was a forgery.

Marshall Williams of Provo is puzzled over the case, as Hamilton, in spite of a derisive session of the "third degree," refused to "come through" in the "sweat box," and proclaimed his innocence.

That check really was signed by Hickok, it's all right, and you are holding me illegally. I'll make the police force of Provo sweat for this outrage," Hamilton said; "and the other check was given to me by John Watson, whom I know. I have known for several years. I met him on the street here, and being short of funds after my Thanksgiving day celebration, I asked him to loan me $10, which he did by giving me this check. If it is not good, I know nothing about it."

"I am employed by the Healy Mining company of Salt Lake City, and am foreman of its mine in American Fork canyon, where that property is being worked. At present it is not possible for me to work my men there, on account of the water, and I am developing another piece of property there for the same purpose."

Pathetic Incident Occurs In After-Theater Crowd

It was a crowd of matinee-goers which congregated on the corner of Second South and State streets Monday late in the afternoon. Most of them were waiting for cars while many were the usual hangers-on who were taking in the physical and human sights. They were a good natured lot, pleased with their afternoon entertainment and at peace with the world.

It was on the northwest corner that a woman, clad in furs and a rich color brought on by the drop in the temperature, and accompanied by a very masculine escort, stopped and patiently waited. The woman was good to look upon, a beautiful face and form becomingly gowning a pardonable cynosure for male eyes which were generally not averse to enjoying the spectacle of the "noblesse work" of the delfy. Her comrade was in physical keeping with the woman, marred somewhat by a rakish tilt of hat and a fuming cigarette.

Half a dozen paces away a quietly dressed man stood on the curb, thoughtfully tapping the sidewalk with a cane. A prosperous business man he seemed, unassuming and apparently not seeking notice. A pair of wide-open blue eyes, intense in their stare, were fixed glaringly upon the face of the woman in furs. It was not an offensive stare, respectful if anything in character, but it was steady and unwavering.

After a time the woman colored and said something to her escort. He glanced about for a moment, stared in turn at the man on the curb, and then threw away the cigarette. Pulling his hat still further down over one eye he strode over to the man with the blue eyes.

Without a word he pulled back his right arm, and then sent his clenched fist straight into the face, landing between the eyes, and sending the offender to the muddy street. He was picked up while a number of bystanders rushed to his assistance.

"I'll teach you to look at my wife like that," he thundered, as he stood over the man whom he had knocked down, and whose face was streaming with blood.

"I beg your pardon, sir, quiet response, as he wiped blood from his face, "but I'm blind."

Mme. Marcella Sembrich

Madame Marcella Sembrich, one of the greatest living coloratura sopranos of the age, will sing in the Salt Lake theater Thursday night. Madame Sembrich has sung in all the great opera houses of the world and has achieved greater success than any other singer, excepting Madame Patti. Owing to operatic engagements at the Metropolitan opera house in New York, Mme Sembrich has been unable to make an extended concert tour of this country. Last February she sang her last performance in grand opera in this country.

This season she will tour the entire country, giving concerts in all the large cities. She has, since the tour began, sung in twenty different cities, and after her appearance in Salt Lake she has engagements that will take her to every part of the country. Yesterday Mme Sembrich sang in Denver, and after her concert here on Thursday she will go directly to the Pacific coast, where she has twelve concerts. It is doubtful if America will ever hear this wonderful singer after this season.

In addition to singing many songs, Mme. Sembrich will sing her famous arias from the operas Ernani, The Magic Flute and Don Giovanni, as well as the great Strauss waltz, "Voice de Primavera."

*We hope the people of Salt Lake will take advantage of this last opportunity to hear so great a singer as Mme. Sembrich, in person—the theater should be packed from "pit to gallery." But we want to tell you that this will not be the last opportunity to hear her voice. Like the voices of

Victor other great singers, hers has been recorded on the delicate surfaces of Victor Records. Four of the numbers she will give

Thursday night, Don Giovanni, Ernani, Voce di Primavera and The Lass With the Delicate Air, are among the dozens her voice has recorded, and we respectfully invite you to come to our Victor Parlors and hear them reproduced on the marvelous Victor Victrola. Come after you have heard the Madam. And if you do not hear Sembrich herself, there is double reason why you should come and hear the "records."
